The building at the southeast corner of Wellington and King in downtown Hensall has served Hensall and area as a restaurant since Fred Smallacombe opened the Kozy Korner after the Bank of Commerce moved from the site in 1929. The restaurant would change hands through the years but through several owners: Smallacombe, Bill Lee, the Forresters, Harold Foster and the Reids the restaurant would retain the name Kozy Korner.

The Kozy Korner, and the restaurants that would follow in the same location with different names through the years, have always been a place where people in the community would gather over a meal or a cup of coffee to discuss the latest news whether it be good, bad or unbelievable. It has been a place where residents have come throughout their lives and today it continues to be a place where locals come to eat and visit. The name may be different, RoRos, but the good memories, good times and good people remain the same.
